

Pat Cox and Aleksander Kwasniewski support 'historic changes' in Ukraine

The co-chairs of the European Parliament Monitoring Mission to Ukraine, Pat Cox, former President of the European Parliament and Aleksander Kwasniewski, former President of Poland, have issued a statement on their latest visit to Ukraine.

The two say, "As the country is living through the most remarkable historic changes in its modern history; we would like to express to the people of Ukraine our admiration, our support and our encouragement."

In 2012 and 2013 the pair made 27 visits to Ukraine, looking to promote the Association Agreement and petition for the release of former leader, Yulia Tymoshenko.

"We are extremely pleased to welcome her freedom," say the duo.

They continue, "We wish to pay our deepest respects to all who have died during the last few weeks and to offer our sincere condolences to all families and relatives of Maidan's victims. Major political changes are taking place in Ukraine as a result of the extraordinary mobilisation of the Ukrainian people fighting for a better future and a more democratic and European Ukraine."

Noting the violence, they state, "These achievements have come at a great cost to Ukraine. Too many have been killed due to the failure of the previous administration to listen to citizens' clamour for change. Justice is necessary, fair Justice, in line with Ukraine's international commitments."

Seeking a peaceful future, they say, "Revenge would be to repeat the mistakes of the past."

To the future, they say, "The large mobilisation in Kyiv and in many other cities must have regard to those many Ukrainians who today are worried about their future and that of their country. The next government of Ukraine must work for the future of all Ukrainians without exception to ensure stability, to guarantee the unity of the country and to pave the way for transformation."

They urge action, saying, "Key to avoid disappointing the high expectations of all Ukrainians will be the effective fight against corruption and cronyism which poisons Ukraine's politics and political class, as well as real reform of the judicial and electoral systems to ensure a truly democratic future for Ukraine."

The pair believe that a working relationship with Moscow is also key to a better future, saying, "The international community and in particular the European Union urgently must support Ukraine in preserving its territorial integrity and in facilitating in all ways possible the country's passage to greater democracy, justice and prosperity. The EU must also strive to develop a positive and constructive engagement with Russia on Ukraine's regional relations."
